Geex Web

FREE RESOURCE · V1.0

The 10-Minute SaaS UI/UX Audit.

A self-guided checklist for SaaS founders who suspect their landing page is leaking conversions — but don't have time for a 40-page Figma report.

FOR	TIME	FORMAT
SaaS founders & PMs	10 minutes	10 checks · Score / 50

HA

Haseeb Ansari
Founder, Geex Web · SaaS UI/UX & CRO

geexweb.com
hello@geexweb.com

HOW TO USE THIS

Read it. Score it. Fix it.

Most landing page audits drown you in 40 slides of "best practice." This isn't that. Open your site on one screen, this PDF on the other, and walk through the 10 checks. Each one takes about 60 seconds.

What you'll get: a score out of 50, a clear shortlist of what to fix first, and a sense of whether your landing page is the actual reason your conversion rate is stuck — or whether it's something else upstream.

1

Note the page details

URL, primary goal, and target persona. We've given you example prompts on the next page.

2

Walk through the 10 checks

Read the question. Look at your page. Tick the boxes. Score 1–5 honestly.

3

Tally your score on page 7

40+ = solid foundation. 25–39 = leaking conversions. Under 25 = needs surgery.

4

Decide what to do next

Take the shortlist and fix it yourself, or grab a free Loom audit (last page). Both work.

STEP 1 · SETUP

Get clear on the page first.

Before scoring, answer these in your head (or jot them on paper). The clearer the goal, the more honest your score.

→ PAGE BEING AUDITED

What's the URL?

e.g. yoursaas.com or yoursaas.com/pricing

PRIMARY GOAL OF THIS PAGE

What's the one action you want a visitor to take?

e.g. Book a demo · Start free trial · Capture email · Buy now

ONE SPECIFIC PERSONA

Who, exactly, is this page for?

e.g. "Series A SaaS founder, 10–50 employees, 1st marketing hire"

CURRENT CONVERSION RATE

If you know it

e.g. 1.2% on the pricing page

TARGET CONVERSION RATE

What would change the business?

e.g. 3% would 2.5x our pipeline

Honest scoring tip: If you're not sure whether your hero passes the 5-second test, it doesn't. Score it a 2.

STEP 2 · THE 10 CHECKS

Above the fold.

The first three checks decide whether anyone scrolls. Most landing pages lose the visitor here.

01 The 5-second test

SCORE __ / 5

Show your hero to someone who has never seen the product. Five seconds, then close the tab. Can they tell you (a) what it does, (b) who it's for, (c) what to do next?

- [ ] Hero headline names the outcome, not just the category
- [ ] Sub-headline names the audience or use case
- [ ] Primary CTA is visible without scrolling

02 Headline does work

SCORE __ / 5

Is the headline a specific promise — or a tagline? "Smart workflows for modern teams" is a tagline. "Cut your invoicing time from 4 hours to 20 minutes" is a promise.

- [ ] Headline contains a number, outcome, or job-to-be-done
- [ ] It would not work for any of your competitors as-is
- [ ] Reads naturally on mobile (under 9 words ideal)

03 Primary CTA clarity

SCORE __ / 5

There should be one primary action above the fold. Not two. Not "Sign up OR Book demo OR Watch video." One.

- [ ] One primary CTA, visually dominant
- [ ] CTA copy is verb + outcome ("Start my free audit") not generic ("Get started")
- [ ] No competing buttons in the same visual weight

STEP 2 · CONTINUED

Trust & clarity.

Once they scroll, your job is to remove doubt — fast. These three checks find the silent objections.

04 Social proof in the first scroll

SCORE __ / 5

A logo bar with no context is wallpaper. Real social proof is specific: a customer photo, a quote about a result, a number that's verifiable.

- [ ] At least one named customer with a real outcome stated
- [ ] Logos are recognizable to your ICP (not just "famous brands")
- [ ] Numbers are specific (not "thousands of customers")

05 Sells outcomes, not features

SCORE __ / 5

Read every section header in order. Are they describing what the product does — or what the customer gets? "AI-powered analytics" is a feature. "Stop guessing what your users want" is an outcome.

- [ ] Section headers lead with customer language, not product language
- [ ] Each feature block ties back to a result or pain point
- [ ] No screenshot is shown without explaining why it matters

06 Pricing is honest & visible

SCORE __ / 5

If you hide pricing behind "Contact sales" without a reason, you're filtering out high-intent buyers who want to self-qualify. Price ranges are fine. Mystery is not.

- [ ] Pricing or a price range is visible from the homepage in 1 click
- [ ] Each plan answers "who is this for?"
- [ ] FAQ addresses the top 3 objections (cancel, refund, contracts)

STEP 2 · CONTINUED

Craft & conversion.

The final four are where most "fine" landing pages quietly fail. Polish, mobile, and the close.

07 Mobile actually works

SCORE __ / 5

Open your page on your phone right now. Most SaaS pages are designed at 1440px and break in subtle ways under 400px — fonts too small, CTAs cut off, images cropped weirdly.

- [ ] Hero CTA is tappable above the fold on mobile
- [ ] No horizontal scroll anywhere on the page
- [ ] Body text is at least 16px on mobile

08 Visual hierarchy & craft

SCORE __ / 5

Squint at the page. Is there one clear focal point per section? Or does everything fight for attention? Inconsistent spacing, eight font weights, and stock illustrations all signal “I don’t trust this.”

- [ ] Consistent spacing rhythm between sections
- [ ] Max 2 font weights, max 3 type sizes per section
- [ ] Imagery is original or earned, not generic stock

STEP 2 · CONTINUED

Speed & the close.

The last two checks. Technical hygiene below the headline, and the moment your warmest visitor reaches the bottom.

09 Page speed & technical hygiene

SCORE __ / 5

Run the URL through PageSpeed Insights. Anything under 70 on mobile is costing you conversions before anyone even reads the headline.

- [ ] PageSpeed Insights mobile score 70+
- [ ] Largest Contentful Paint under 2.5s
- [ ] No layout shift while scrolling

10 The close

SCORE __ / 5

The bottom of your page is prime real estate. A scroller who made it here is your warmest visitor. Don't waste them on a footer.

- [ ] Final CTA section repeats the primary action
- [ ] One-line risk reversal ("No card. Cancel anytime.")
- [ ] Secondary path for non-buyers (newsletter, case study)

STEP 3 · TALLY UP

Your scorecard.

Add up your scores. Be honest — a 4 is "this is good." A 5 is "this is exceptional and I can prove it."

Final score

Out of 50

01 · 5-second test		02 · Headline
03 · Primary CTA		04 · Social proof
05 · Outcomes		06 · Pricing
07 · Mobile		08 · Hierarchy
09 · Speed		10 · The close

TOTAL ___ / 50

40 – 50

Solid foundation. The page isn't your bottleneck — look at traffic quality, pricing, or onboarding next.

25 – 39

Leaking conversions. Every check below 4 is a fixable lift. Start with the lowest-scoring three.

Below 25

Needs surgery, not patches. A focused 1–2 week redesign sprint is the right move.

Top 3 to fix this week

Look at your lowest-scoring three checks. Not your favorites to fix — your lowest. Mentally list them, write them down, or add them to your roadmap before you close this PDF.

WANT A SECOND PAIR OF EYES?

I'll do this audit on your page. For free.

Send me your URL. I'll record a 10-minute Loom walking through your page using this exact framework — but with the things only a CRO designer would catch. No pitch deck. No commitment. Just one founder helping another see what they're too close to see.

→ Loom video

10-minute walkthrough of your page, your score, and the top 3 fixes.

→ Written shortlist

A short doc with prioritized fixes, ranked by impact and effort.

→ Mobile teardown

Annotated screenshots of issues that only show up under 400px.

→ 48-hour turnaround

In your inbox within 2 working days. No back-and-forth required.

→ Email hello@geexweb.com →

Subject line: "Free audit — [your URL]". That's it.

Why free? Most founders don't know whether their landing page is the bottleneck — or whether it's the offer, the traffic, or the onboarding. A 10-minute audit answers that. If we're a fit to work together after that, great. If not, you've still got something useful. Either way works.